

gracenote.

Infostrada Sports is now Gracenote

Champions League Review Last 16 - First leg (23 February)

Arsenal - FC Barcelona 0-2

- Based on historic results, this 2-0 Barcelona win means that Arsenal have a 2.3% chance of reaching the quarterfinals. FC Barcelona have a 97.7% chance to progress.
- Arsenal have lost the first leg of their Last 16 CL knockout tie in five successive seasons.
- Arsenal became the fourth team to lose 50 CL matches after FC Porto (53), Olympiacos (52) and Galatasaray (51).
- For the first time in his career that Lionel Messi beat Petr Cech, who had kept him at bay in their first six meetings in all competitions for club and country.
- Lionel Messi scored his 81st and 82nd career CL goal and his 34th and 35th in the knockout phase. In both statistical categories, only Cristiano Ronaldo (89 total, 40 in the knockout phase) is outscoring him.
- Messi has scored eight CL goals against Arsenal. The only teams that have conceded as much CL goals against a certain player are BATE Borisov against Luiz Adriano and AC Milan against also Messi.

Juventus - Bayern München 2-2

- Based on historic results, this 2-2 draw means that Juventus have 19.4% chance of reaching the quarterfinals. Bayern München have an 80.6% chance to progress.
- Juventus are now unbeaten in their last 13 CL home matches (W8-D5-L0) since losing 2-0 to Bayern München on 10 April 2013.
- Juventus have conceded only three goals in 2016. Bayern scored two goals and Sampdoria one goal. This was Juve's 12th official match since New Year's.
- Thomas Müller scored his 34th CL goal. He surpassed Fernando Morientes in the top scorers' list in 12th place.
- Arjen Robben has now scored 26 CL goals of which 14 in the CL KO phase.
- Robben (14) is the only Dutchman with more than eight CL goals in the knockout stages.
- Paulo Dybala scored his first CL goal and became the 55th Juventus player to score in the Champions League, equalling Chelsea's number. Only six teams have more different goalscorers in the CL. Stefano Sturaro became their 56th different goalscorer in the competition.