Tour de France 2016 - Stage 19 (22 July)

- Romain Bardet (AG2R) became the first French stage winner this Tour. Since 1999, only in 2011 the first stage win for France was stage 19 when Pierre Rolland won.
- Bardet won his second Tour stage in his career, after he won mountain stage 18 in last year's Tour to Saint-Jean-de-Maurienne in a solo.
- Bardet became the first French rider to win stages in back-to-back Tour editions since Pierre Rolland in 2011 and 2012.
- Bardet became the sixth French rider to win multiple mountain stages in the Tour in the last ten years (2007-2016) after Thomas Voeckler (3), Christophe Riblon (2), Pierre Rolland (2), Pierrick Fédrigo (2) and Sandy Casar (2).
- AG2R have now won at least one stage in the last four Tour de France editions (2013-2016). Only Lotto and Quick-Step have also achieved this.
- Bardet became the first winner from Italy, France or Spain. For the first time in history no rider from France, Italy or Spain had won any of the first 18 individual stages (excludes team time trials).
- Chris Froome (42) surpasses Sylvère Maes in outright fifth place for most general classification leads in the Tour de France (excluding the disqualified Lance Armstrong).
- Rafal Majka will become the 15th rider to win the mountain classification twice in the Tour de France if he finishes in Paris.
- If Majka finishes in Paris, it will be for the second time in Tour history that no French, Spanish or Italian rider wins the mountain classification in the Tour in four editions in a row. This only happened in 1969-1972, when Eddy Merckx (BEL) and Lucien Van Impe (BEL) both won twice.
- The last rider from France, Italy or Spain to win the polka dot jersey was Thomas Voeckler (FRA) in 2012.
